From the President’s Desk

To the 388th BG family

Thanks you for the opportunity to serve the organization as President. As we saw this years highly successful event in Oklahoma City, there still is significant enthusiasm and attendance. Hats off to Jenifer Wammack and family for their herculean effort assuring all went off without a hitch, particularly in the middle of a Government shutdown and resulting challenging Hotel / Tour arrangements. Also hats off to all the board members that assisted Jennifer and me in assuring all the bases were covered. Their past experience with contracts, attendance sign-up trends, contacts with support organizations and energetic enthusiasm were invaluable.

Next years venue, including Hill Air Force base and the hosting by our legacy, the 388th Fighter Wing will be great fun and a bell weather for the future. Let’s encourage more 3rd generation participation during the August event. Having Steve Butner’s family present this year was a treasure and the Grandkids participation in the banquet a special experience.

At our board meeting and our annual meeting we focused on “Who we are” and where the organization is going. The overwhelming conclusion was that the reunion is about our original members, that we can continue that focus as we move forward. Rick Thompson, our new president challenged us to contact as many veterans and family as possible around the holidays and is setting up a Phone call organization to allow that to happen. As we saw this year we had some new members and original members at attending for the first time. The phone call awareness program may help maintain and even increase membership.

To the original members ….Gentleman, my Father wanted to pass on that he missed you and being part of the festivities. I was able to show him video and many stills of all the activity. Again, thank you all for the support and giving me the opportunity to serve. I look forward to seeing you all in Ogden Utah next year.

All The Best,

Ben Forest Jr.

REMINISCE

A Canadian goose was grazing on a knoll in our field. The grass was high. I wondered how this bird was going to fly out of there. Not to worry, it made it and quite gracefully too. This brought me back to my B17 Flying Fortress days. Loaded with heavy bombs and with all four engines revved up we lumbered down the runway gaining speed. It seemed like forever. Finally a sense of the tires leaving the runway. A sense of being airborne. Only then do we uncross our fingers. And then, like the Canadian geese, we rise and seek our place in the formation.

MECHANICS

One of the most challenging support groups of the 388th were the mechanics who were responsible for keeping the planes in flying condition. In addition to doing normal maintenance on aircraft that were pushed to their limits, the mechanics had to get badly damaged aircraft back to combat readiness in the shortest amount of time. They would patch holes, replace engines and propellers, repair damaged systems as well as clean up blood. This was done outdoors in all kinds of weather at the hardstand. A nearby tent would provide a small bit of shelter.

Each squadron had its complement of mechanics that were organized into crews. The crew consisted of a crew chief and four or five others. The mechanics specialized in a number of areas - engine or propeller repair, radio and electrical systems, hydraulics. Each crew was responsible for an aircraft but the crews would work together as needed.

Unfortunately we have little information on the mechanics and would like to get more. We do have many mechanics identified and their squadron but for most of them do not know their crew. Any information that you can provide me will be much appreciated.

Dear 388th Bombers,

On a recent trip with my husband to Oklahoma City, we happened to be staying in the same hotel that was hosting your reunion. We saw the signs welcoming you to OKC and looked on with great pride as you met together in the center court area. It is with disappointment that we did not approach each of you personally to thank you for the service you have shown to our Country. We are grateful for the freedoms you have helped preserve and pray that they are never taken for granted.

With deepest respect,

World War II vets visit Tinker

Twenty World War II veterans of the 388th Bombardment Group, and approximately 65 of their family members, toured Tinker AFB on Oct. 3 and ate lunch at the Tinker Club. Afterward, the aviators posed for a group photo. Then-Lt. Charles Neff, a bombardier who had never flown an airplane but miraculously guided a crippled B-17 Flying Fortress from Berlin back to its home base in England and landed the aircraft without crashing, is sitting at the far right, holding a cane.

Mike W. Ray
Staff Writer

Today they walk with canes or get pushed in wheelchairs. But 70 years ago the members of the 388th Bombardment Group were young men in their late teens or early 20s, risking their lives flying in B-17s on bombing missions over Nazi-occupied Europe.

Twenty surviving veterans of the Army Air Corps unit, along with about 65 family members, visited Tinker AFB last week in conjunction with the 388th Bomb Group Association’s 64th annual reunion. “It’s unusual for a unit to maintain this kind of coherence,” said Ben Forrest Jr., outgoing president of the organization.

The visitors got a “windshield tour” of the base on a pair of chartered buses, escorted by members of the 72nd Air Base Wing Security Forces Squadron, and afterward they ate lunch at the Tinker Club. After the meal they were treated to a flyover by a B-17 from the Commemorative Air Force. The reunion concluded with a banquet Saturday night at an Oklahoma City hotel.

“We are especially pleased to know you wanted to come to Tinker Air Force Base,” Col. Christopher Azzano, 72nd ABW and Tinker installation commander, told the entourage at the Tinker Club. “And thank you for the legacy you have left for our generation,” he continued.
“We so much appreciate your service.” The colonel noted that Tinker was established in 1941 and is named for Maj. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker, an Oklahoman and Native American who lost his life while leading a group of bombers on a mission against the Japanese in the vicinity of Wake Island on June 7, 1942. Colonel Azzano revealed that his father was a crew chief on a B-25 Mitchell bomber in World War II. Renzo Azzano, now 91, a first-generation American son of Italian immigrants, enlisted in the Army Air Corps after Pearl Harbor.

The 388th BG, a unit of the 8th Air Force, originated in 1942, according to Mr. Forrest, of Bellevue, Wash. The 388th still exists but has evolved into a fighter wing based at Hill AFB in Utah, he related.

History records that some 30,000 members of the Army Air Forces died in the European and Mediterranean theaters of operation. About 14,000 were wounded — many sustained frostbite from numbing temperatures as low as 50-below while flying in uninsulated airplanes at altitudes of 25-30,000 feet — and approximately 33,000 were captured and spent some time as prisoners of war. Only German U-boat submariners had a higher rate of casualties during the war.

The 388th flew more than 300 combat missions between July 17, 1943, and May 20, 1945, records reflect. The missions were focused primarily on targets in Germany and France, but some of the missions went to Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Ledgers show that 12,731 B-17 Flying Fortresses were built, and 4,754 of them — including 142 from the 388th Bombardment Group — were shot down, crashed or simply went missing in the European Theater of Operations.

About half of the 20 surviving members of the 388th who attended the reunion in Oklahoma City were captured during the war, said Henry Curvat of Jacksonville, Fla., past president of the 388th Bomb Group Association. His adopted father, Col. Wayne Daniels, was shot down on his third mission and spent the remainder of the war in a POW camp.

“Every day, they didn’t know whether they were coming back,” said Mr. Forrest, himself a naval and commercial aviator.

For example, the first 388 BG crew shot down in combat were on their first mission. And Mr. Forrest’s father, now 90 and living in a nursing home, was a ball turret gunner on a Flying Fortress that had a harrowing experience on a bombing run over Berlin on March 29, 1944.

With the pilot and co-pilot both wounded, bombardier/navigator Charles Neff, who had never flown an airplane, took control of their plummeting, crippled B-17 — which was named “Borrowed Time”. Lieutenant Neff leveled off at 9,000 feet and managed to steer the aircraft back to their home base in England via an unplanned, alternate route. He performed the first-ever landing of a B-17 on autopilot, and brought the aircraft down intact, albeit two hours behind schedule. The entire 10-man crew survived.

Mr. Neff, 88, said he finally was sent home after completing 35 bombing missions across Europe, including two on D-day, June 6, 1944.

The 65th reunion of the 388th Bomb Group Association will be held next year in Ogden, Utah, home of Hill AFB, said Rick Thompson of Cincinnati, Ohio, the incoming president.
